The Adventures of... CAP and CINO

Cap and Cino

This month our friends go to the biggest sporting event in the world!

Cap and Cino live in a rather splendid cafe called 'Coates House' where they help out with the washing up and every now and again find themselves in the middle of some quite amazing adventures...

The summer was well underway and following their enjoyment of the Euros and England narrowly losing in the final, our friends were looking for more opportunities to get outdoors and have fun! Simon suggested that they might like to try playing some sports – he was very keen on rugby but Cap and Cino found it a bit too muddy for their liking. After having a go at badminton, golf and throwing the discus, they eventually found that they both really enjoyed running... and were VERY good at it! Cap excelled at sprinting, which is running very quickly over 100 or 200 meters. Sometimes having to jump over hurdles (and everybody knows that cats are quite skilful at jumping). On the other hand, Cino turned out to be especially talented at long distance events, like 800 meters and even 1500 meters. And you don't have to do any jumping for those (everyone knows that dogs DON'T like jumping)!

Soon, Cap and Cino began to catch the attention of some local athletic coaches and before long, they were competing against the best runners in town. More time went by and the friends were seemingly in the newspapers every week, pictured holding a trophy or two for races they had won! Jim, the head of the local Running Club suggested they were even fast enough to enter the Olympic Games – and only the very top runners got to do that. Before long, Cap and Cino found themselves standing on the starting line of the 400 meters final, at the 2020 Olympic Games in Tokyo, Japan! They couldn't believe it was true! The starter's gun went 'bang' and the race exploded into life. 400 meters is one lap of the running track and quickly the friends zoomed into the lead. There was a particularly fast runner from Finland but in the end they managed to stay ahead of him and amazingly they crossed the line together in first place!
